

Hard massage

● CITY: MICHELLE IRIZARRY We were hooked even before we found out that (sshhh!) A.I. is a client. But now that we know, come on: If she can soothe his overworked muscles, think what she can do for your sissy kinks. Not that this energetic and intuitive masseuse makes you feel like anything but her top priority. After discussing your lower back issues in the Zen-like confines of one of our favorite city spas, she expertly targets the trouble spots with a well-trained, calibrated touch that goes as deep as you need. From $90; Rescue Rittenhouse Spa Lounge, 255 South 17th Street, mezzanine, 215-772-2766; rescuerittenhousespa.com.

Makeup artist

● NIVES RIDDLES We realize we're obsessed with Rescue Rittenhouse Spa, but we can't help it: Owner Danuta Mieloch continues to recruit talented staffers and introduce the kind of ambitious services we can't get enough of. This year we trusted our precious mugs to Nives Riddles, who showed us what a long way makeup application has come since our days at the Clinique counter. She covers our flaws and highlights features we didn't even know were hiding, and she does it all while offering tips we actually can take with us—because though we've tried, we can't make her come over every morning before work. 255 South 17th Street, mezzanine, 215-772-2766, rescuerittenhousespa.com; 856-217-7457, nivesriddles.com.
